I have a simple loop which checks to see if there are three characters. If the three characters are the characters 'a', 'b', and 'c', then print 'ABC' to the screen. If not, then nothing. The problem is, if the three characters are 'a', 'a', 'a' then the loop will continue. If not, then the loop breaks. This leads to a problem. How do I get the loop to break but also get the execution of main() to continue? Here's my code:

def test_three(): answer = " while answer!= 'ABC': if answer == 'a' or 'b' or 'c': answer = " else: print('Invalid input, Please enter a, b, or c.') return answer def

main(): answer = test_three() print(answer) if __name__ == '__main__': main() A: If you are asking how to break from a loop without terminating the script, you could use the break statement. See below for an example of it in action: def test_three(): answer = " while answer != 'ABC': if answer == 'a' or 'b' or 'c':
answer = " else:
